DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-13,16-25,28-36, 39-44 were examined and rejected.
2. Claims 14,15,26,27,37 and 38 were cancelled.

Section I: Non-Final Office Action (3rd Action)

Abstract

3. The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited.

Specification

4. The disclosure is objected to because of the following minor informalities: unable to locate elements 504, 513 and 1106 within the specification. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Objections

5. Independent claims 17 and 28 reflect a "computer method" within their preambles but the dependent claims state "a method". The Office suggest restating "computer method" of the dependent claims for consistency.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

6. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

7. Claims 1,2,4-13, 16-18, 20-25,28, 29, 31-36 and 39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because they directed to an abstract idea of a mathematical construct—computing a position of a control point, rather than a practical application of the idea.

Incorporation of the limitations found within claims 3, 19 and 30 into their respective independent claims will provide a useful, concrete and tangible result of the mathematical construct, thus placing them in statutory status.

8. Claims 40, 42 and 44 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because they reflect non-statutory subject matter of a data signal.

9. The following is a quotation from the Interim Guidelines for patent subject matter eligibility:

Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. See, e.g., Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

Claims that recite nothing but the physical characteristics of a form of energy, such as a frequency, voltage, or the strength of a magnetic field, define energy or magnetism, per se, and as such are nonstatutory natural phenomena. O'Reilly, 56 U.S. (15 How.) at 112-14. Moreover, it does not appear that a claim reciting a signal encoded with functional descriptive material falls within any of the categories of patentable subject matter set forth in § 101. signal encoded with functional descriptive material falls within any of the categories of patentable subject matter set forth in § 101.

"The term machine includes every mechanical device or combination of mechanical device or combination of mechanical powers and devices to perform some function and produce a certain effect or result." Corning v. Burden, 56 U.S. (15 How.) 252, 267 (1854). A modern definition of machine would no doubt include electronic devices, which perform functions. Indeed, devices such as flip-flops and computers are referred to in computer science as sequential machines. A claimed signal has no physical structure, does not itself perform any useful, concrete and tangible result and, thus, does not fit within the definition of a machine.

A product is a tangible physical article or object, some form of matter, which a signal is not. That the other two product classes, machine and composition of matter, require physical matter is evidence that a manufacture was also intended to require physical matter. A signal, a form of energy, does not fall within either of the two definitions of manufacture. Thus, a signal does not fall within one of the four statutory classes of § 101.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

10. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

11. Claims 1-13, 16-25, 28-36, 39-44 also rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. Specifically, since the claimed invention is not supported by either a specific asserted utility or a well-established utility.

Section III: Response to Applicants Arguments (2nd Office Action)

Information Disclosure Statement

12. Applicants are thanked for addressing this issue. Objection is withdrawn. Furthermore, examiner has acknowledged signed the IDS dated 10/29/04, which has the European search report.

103(a)

13. The applicants are thanked for addressing this issue. Applicants' arguments are persuasive to withdraw the previous rejection.
